Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi Professor Participates in American Psychological Association Conference

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas – Dr. Pamela Brouillard, professor of psychology at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi, will give a presentation on “Internationalizing Gender Studies: A Room with a Different Point of View” during the American Psychological Association (APA) Convention Thursday, Aug. 14, through Sunday, Aug. 17, in Boston.

Brouillard, a Fulbright Scholar to Croatia for the 2004-2005 school year, will be one of around 75 Fulbright Scholars from around the world to participate in the APA convention, which will honor psychologists who have participated in the Fulbright International Scholar program.

Since returning from Croatia, Brouillard has continued to maintain her academic contacts, conduct research and present at symposiums and conferences. This year, she returned to Croatia with two graduate students to present the results of a recent research study conducted with several Croatian colleagues at a student symposium.
