Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi Biology Students Attend Workshops Sponsored by U.S. National Park Service

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas – Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi seniors James Sanchez and Philip Torres were among 38 students from across the United States who participated in four days of workshops in Maine’s Acadia National Park in late July, sponsored by the National Park Service.

The participants, all of whom are students at tribal, historically black or predominately Hispanic-serving colleges, attended classes on writing resumes for the federal government and learned about the National Parks Service, what positions are available and qualifications needed for those positions.

Both Sanchez and Torres are biology majors who participate in the National Science Foundation Undergraduate Mentoring in Biology Program. They will also attend the National Organization for Mexican American Rights (NOMAR) Conference from Wednesday, Aug. 26, through Friday, Aug. 28, in Las Vegas, Nev.
