Two Former Texas A&M-Corpus Christi Adjunct Professors Elected to Phi Theta Kappa Foundation Board of Trustees

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas – Drs. Janice and Joyce Freeman, former adjunct professors in the Department of Teacher Education at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi, have been elected members of the Board of Trustees for the Phi Theta Kappa Foundation.

Following distinguished careers as Professors Emeritus of Biology at Texas A&M-Corpus Christi, Dr. Janice and Dr. Joyce Freeman served as College of Education adjunct professors. Both initially attended Del Mar College, where they earned membership in the Gamma Sigma Chapter of Phi Theta Kappa. Following completion of their graduate and undergraduate studies, the Freemans earned Ph.D. degrees in biology from the University of North Texas. While teaching at Corpus Christi State University (now Texas A&M-Corpus Christi), they led the establishment of and served as charter advisors of the Epsilon of Texas alumni chapter. The Freemans have each been elected and served two successive terms on Phi Theta Kappa's Board of Directors and have been recognized with the Phi Theta Kappa Most Distinguished Alumni Award and the Board of Directors Alumni Achievement Award.

With more than 2 million students, the Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society, based in Jackson, Miss., is the largest honor society in American higher education with 1,250 chapters on college campuses in all 50 of the United States, Canada, Germany, the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, the British Virgin Islands, the United Arab Emirates and U.S. territorial possessions. Established in 2006, the Phi Theta Kappa Foundation serves to direct the society’s fundraising and development efforts.
