Christina Ellard Named Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi 2010-2011 Student Employee of the Year

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas – Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi student Christina Ellard, a junior interdisciplinary studies major who works in the College of Education, has been named the 2010-2011 Student Employee of the Year.

Ellard will receive $100 on her SandDollar$ card. Her name will be added to the perpetual plaque located in Career Services. In addition, the College of Education will have the traveling trophy that reads, “The Student Employee of the Year works here.”

Runners up include:

- Amanda “Mandi” Haynes, first runner up – Haynes, a senior kinesiology major who works in Graduate Studies, will receive $75 on her SandDollar$ card.
- Katie Aleman, second runner up – Aleman, a junior interdisciplinary studies major who works in Career Services, will receive $50 on her SandDollar$ card.

The Student Employee of the Year Program, started by the National Student Employment Association (NSEA), recognizes students who demonstrate qualities in five categories: reliability, quality of work, initiative, professionalism and uniqueness of contribution.

Every campus nationwide that participates in this program selects one outstanding student for the Student Employee of the Year. The winner from each campus is forwarded to their regional competition. Each region then sends their winner to NSEA to be considered for the National Student Employee of the Year award. This is the eighth year that Texas A&M-Corpus Christi’s Career Services has participated in the program.
