University Registrar Michael Rendon Elected President Of Texas Hispanic-Serving Institution Consortium

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas – Michael Rendon, registrar at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi, has been elected president of the Texas Hispanic-Serving Institution Consortium, an organization dedicated to increasing the access, retention and success of students attending consortium member institutions.

Rendon, who began serving his one-year term in January, was previously vice president of the consortium which provides a mechanism for Hispanic-Serving Institutions to exchange information, establish collaborations, and share resources such as facilities, equipment and personnel between member institutions. In addition, the consortium provides funds to selected member institutions for scholarships.

Rendon became registrar at Texas A&M-Corpus Christi in September 2008 and later also assumed the role of director of Veterans Affairs. He previously worked for George Washington University in Washington, D.C.; the United States Air Force Institute of Technology at Wright Air Force Base in Ohio; and the Ross University School of Medicine in North Brunswick, N.J. He received his bachelor’s degree in philosophy from Oblate College and a licentiate in theological studies from Washington Theological Union, both in Washington, D.C.
