Online MBA Program Offered by University's College of Business Allows Students to Earn Master's Degree in as Little as One Year

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas – The College of Business at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi will offer its new Online MBA beginning in the fall 2011 semester.

The Online MBA curriculum requires the same number of credits as the on-campus MBA. However, students with a Bachelor of Business Administration can complete an MBA online in as little as one year. The tuition for the Online MBA is the same as the on-campus MBA.

Using the most comprehensive technology available, the Online MBA program blends high quality text and video with “clickable” materials, links, and student assessments; regardless of the students’ location. All coursework is instructed completely online via the internet and available from virtually anywhere in the world.

“In today’s highly competitive global economy, a high-quality graduate education is not an option, it is imperative, said Dr. Kent Byus, professor in the College of Business. “Your career success depends on the ability to make critical time-sensitive decisions, seize opportunities, and create a productive work place.”

All MBA students must meet the mathematics and computer proficiency requirements or take additional approved courses to satisfy these requirements. Students with non-business undergraduate degrees may be required to earn up to 48 semester credit hours to fulfill the requirements for the MBA degree.

Included are core business courses designed to prepare the student for the advanced courses in the MBA curriculum. The director of Master’s Programs may waive core courses if the student has completed appropriate business courses, regardless of undergraduate degree.
