New Educators to be Recognized during Teacher Education Induction Ceremony at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas – Around 170 Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi students who are receiving degrees that will qualify them to enter the teaching profession will be recognized at the Teacher Education Induction Ceremony on Thursday, May 12, at 6:30 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center.

The event is for all students who have successfully completed the requirements of the Teacher Education Program and are seeking initial certification into the teaching profession. During the ceremony, the new teachers will walk across the stage where their mentors and site professors will place medallions around their necks. The medallions inscribed with the word “Educator” commemorate the student’s entry into the teaching profession. The medallions can be worn over students’ gowns at graduation.
