University Students, Campus Celebrate Starbucks Grand Opening Subway sandwich shop also officially opens to campus community

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas – Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi students and University President Flavius Killebrew today (Thursday, Feb. 2) celebrated the official grand opening of the campus Starbucks Coffee located inside the Faculty Center.

“Students told me having a Starbucks on campus was important to them, and I’m pleased we were able to provide it,” said University President Flavius Killebrew. “We know it will be a place to gather and build community as much as a place to buy coffee.”

State Rep. Todd Hunter, who was also present for the opening and ribbon-cutting, had his first cup of joe from the new Starbucks with the campus community. The crowd enjoyed free coffee and pastries. Starbucks will create about 20 new jobs on campus.

During the event, the campus also celebrated the grand opening of the remodeled Subway sandwich shop at the Mary and Jeff Bell Library breezeway. Subway will employ 12 to 16 people.
