Center for Faculty Excellence

(January 2013)

The purpose of the Center for Faculty Excellence (CFE) is to promote and support the lifelong learning and continual professional growth and development of the faculty at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi. The Center, created under a different name in 2003, hopes to play a key role in creating a campus culture that values and acknowledges the contributions of faculty in the areas of teaching, scholarship, and service.

- It coordinates faculty development across the university and acts as a repository and resource for faculty to learn about, benefit from, and participate in formal and informal professional development activities across the campus and beyond.
- It coordinates and provides programs, activities, and resources that help faculty identify and achieve their professional goals in teaching, scholarship, and service.
- It seeks to foster a campus culture that acknowledges and values faculty and their ongoing growth and development as teachers, scholars, and active members of the campus and the local community.

For more information on the activities and opportunities offered by the Center, please see its site on the University Homepage.
