

Brewster Street Blues a photograph by William Whitworth.

The passion, the music, and the atmosphere are what help tell the story of this image. This was one of his first photography gigs at Brewster Street where he covered a jazz/rock band. He was inspired by this to title the piece Brewster Street Blues. William Whitworth has been capturing photographs for about two and a half years. He loves to go to live events, especially with live music. He can capture musicians and their passion. He thanks his mentor when he was a TAMUCC university photographer for creating a supportive and strong foundation for him. He has combined his love of people and photography.