Texas A&M-Corpus Christi Debuts New Mixed Reality Headsets for Nursing Education, Simulation

The CONHS is one of only two nursing programs in the nation to integrate the use of obstetrics mixed reality (MR) technology into both the simulation lab and the classroom. The high-tech mannequin and MR goggles use holographic visualization to enhance labor and delivery simulation, allowing students hands-on training through seamless and powerful scenario integration. The holograms are synchronized with the physical world, allowing learners to see inside the OB simulator and observe a life-like holographic infant through the birthing canal.
